

Elephant And The Tailor

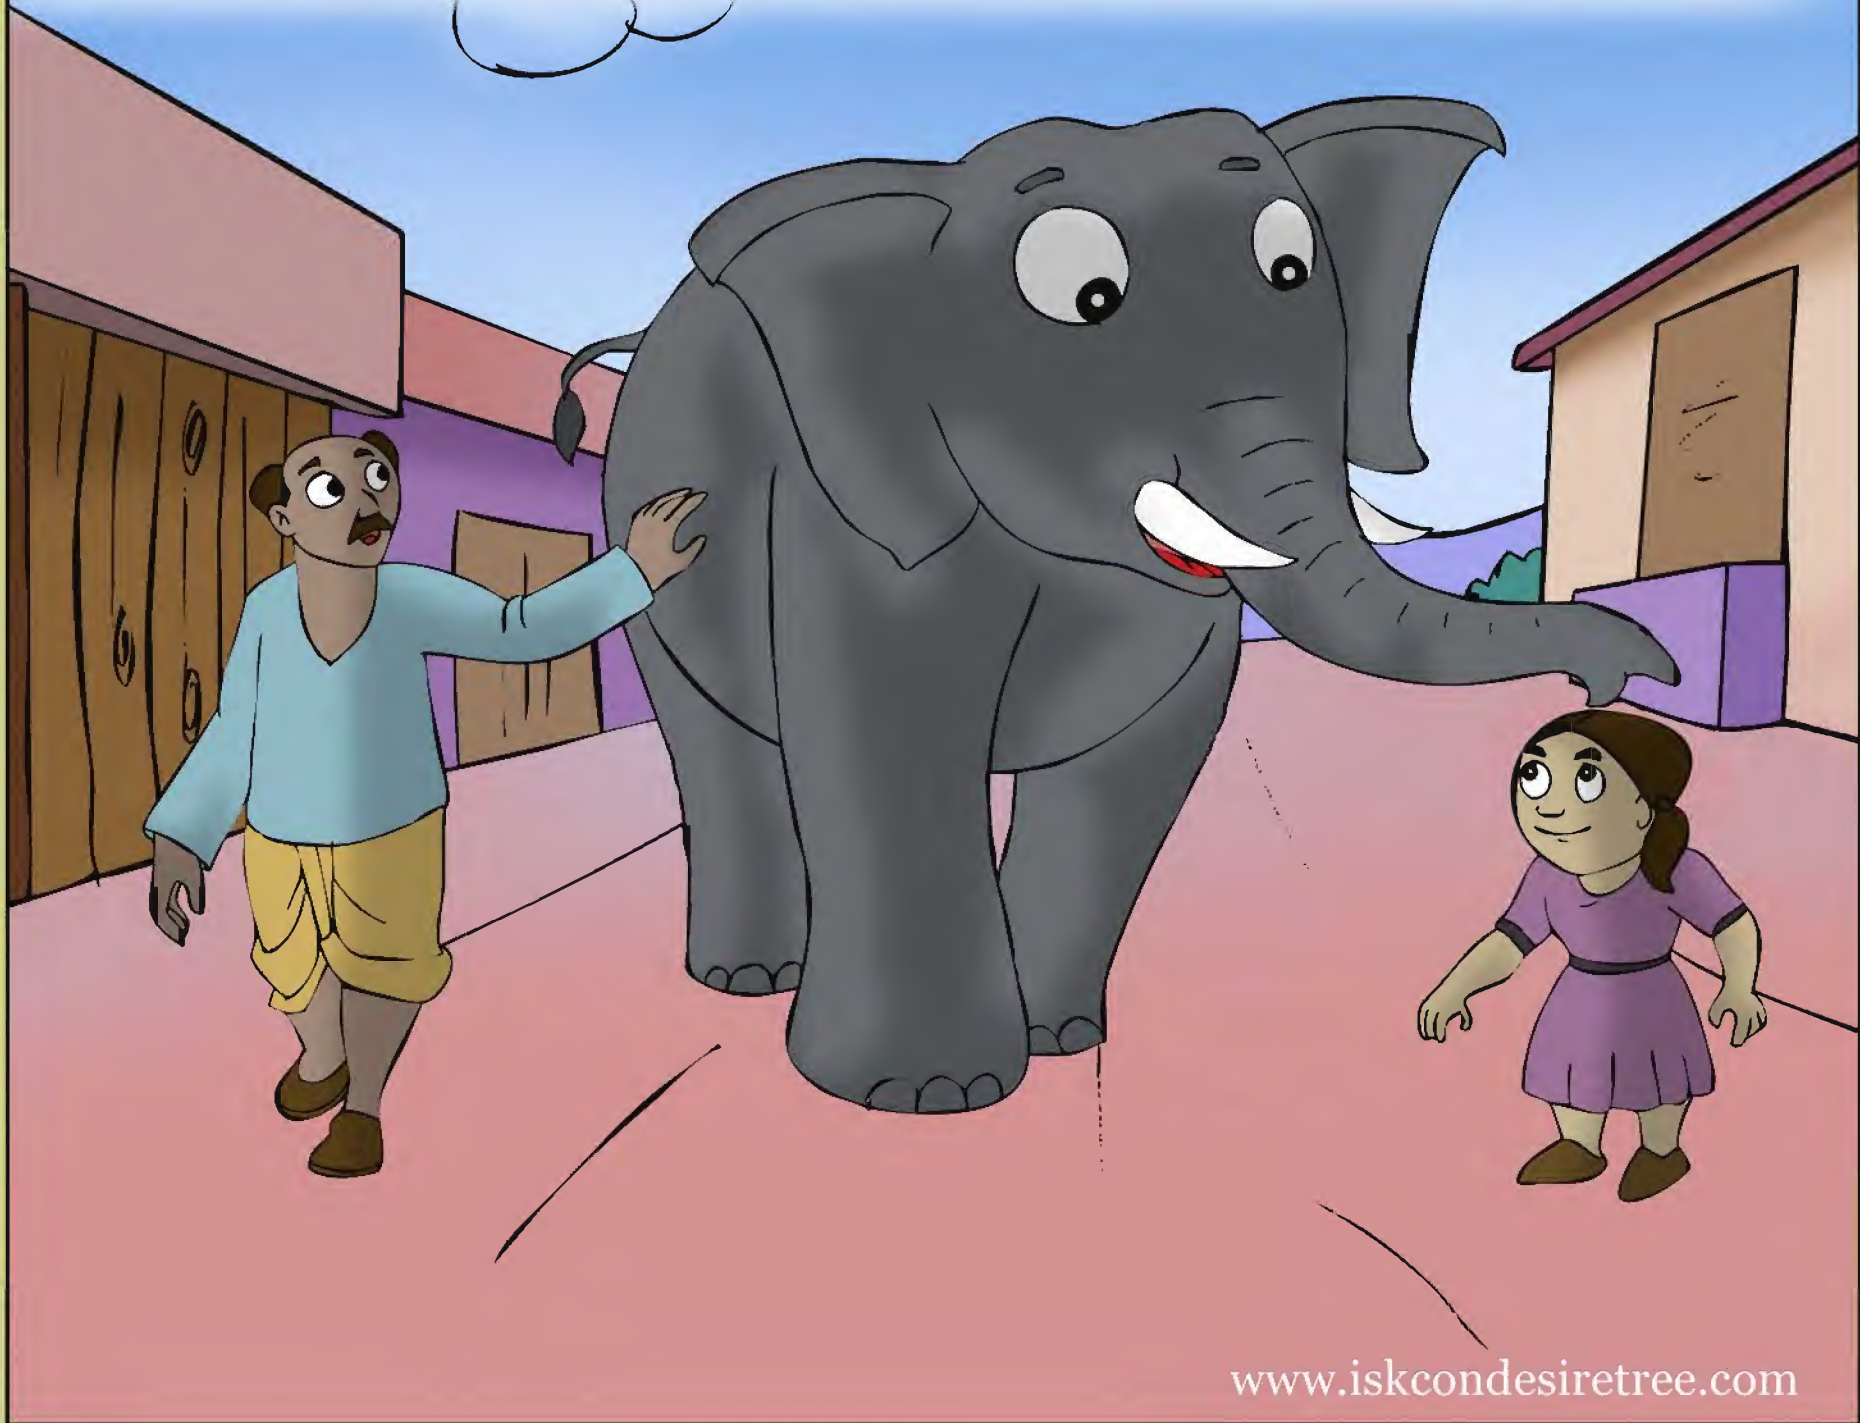

Once upon a time, there was a huge elephant in the jungle.

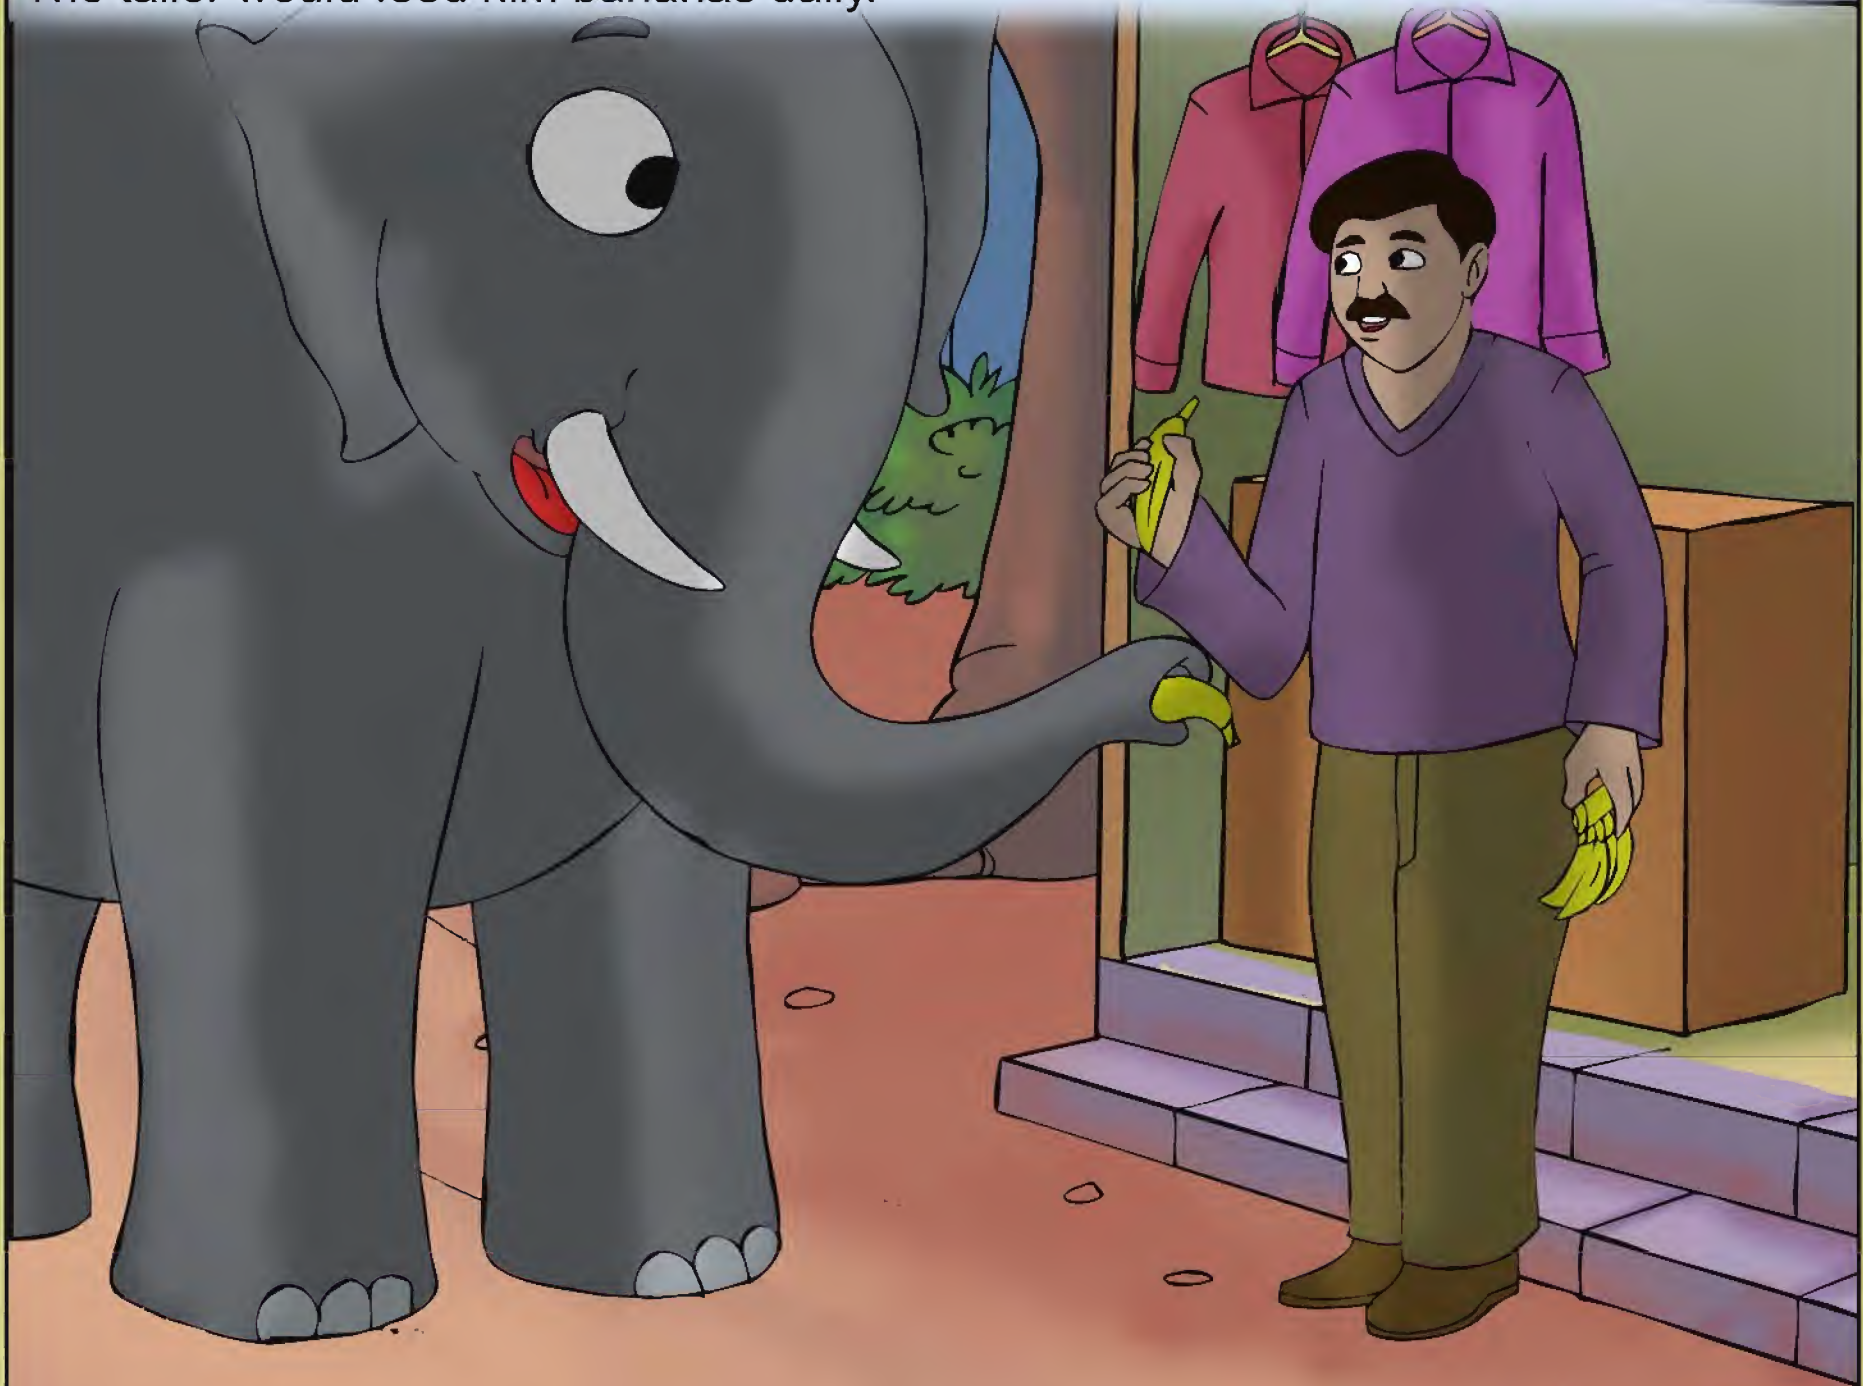

In the nearby village, there was a famous tailor.

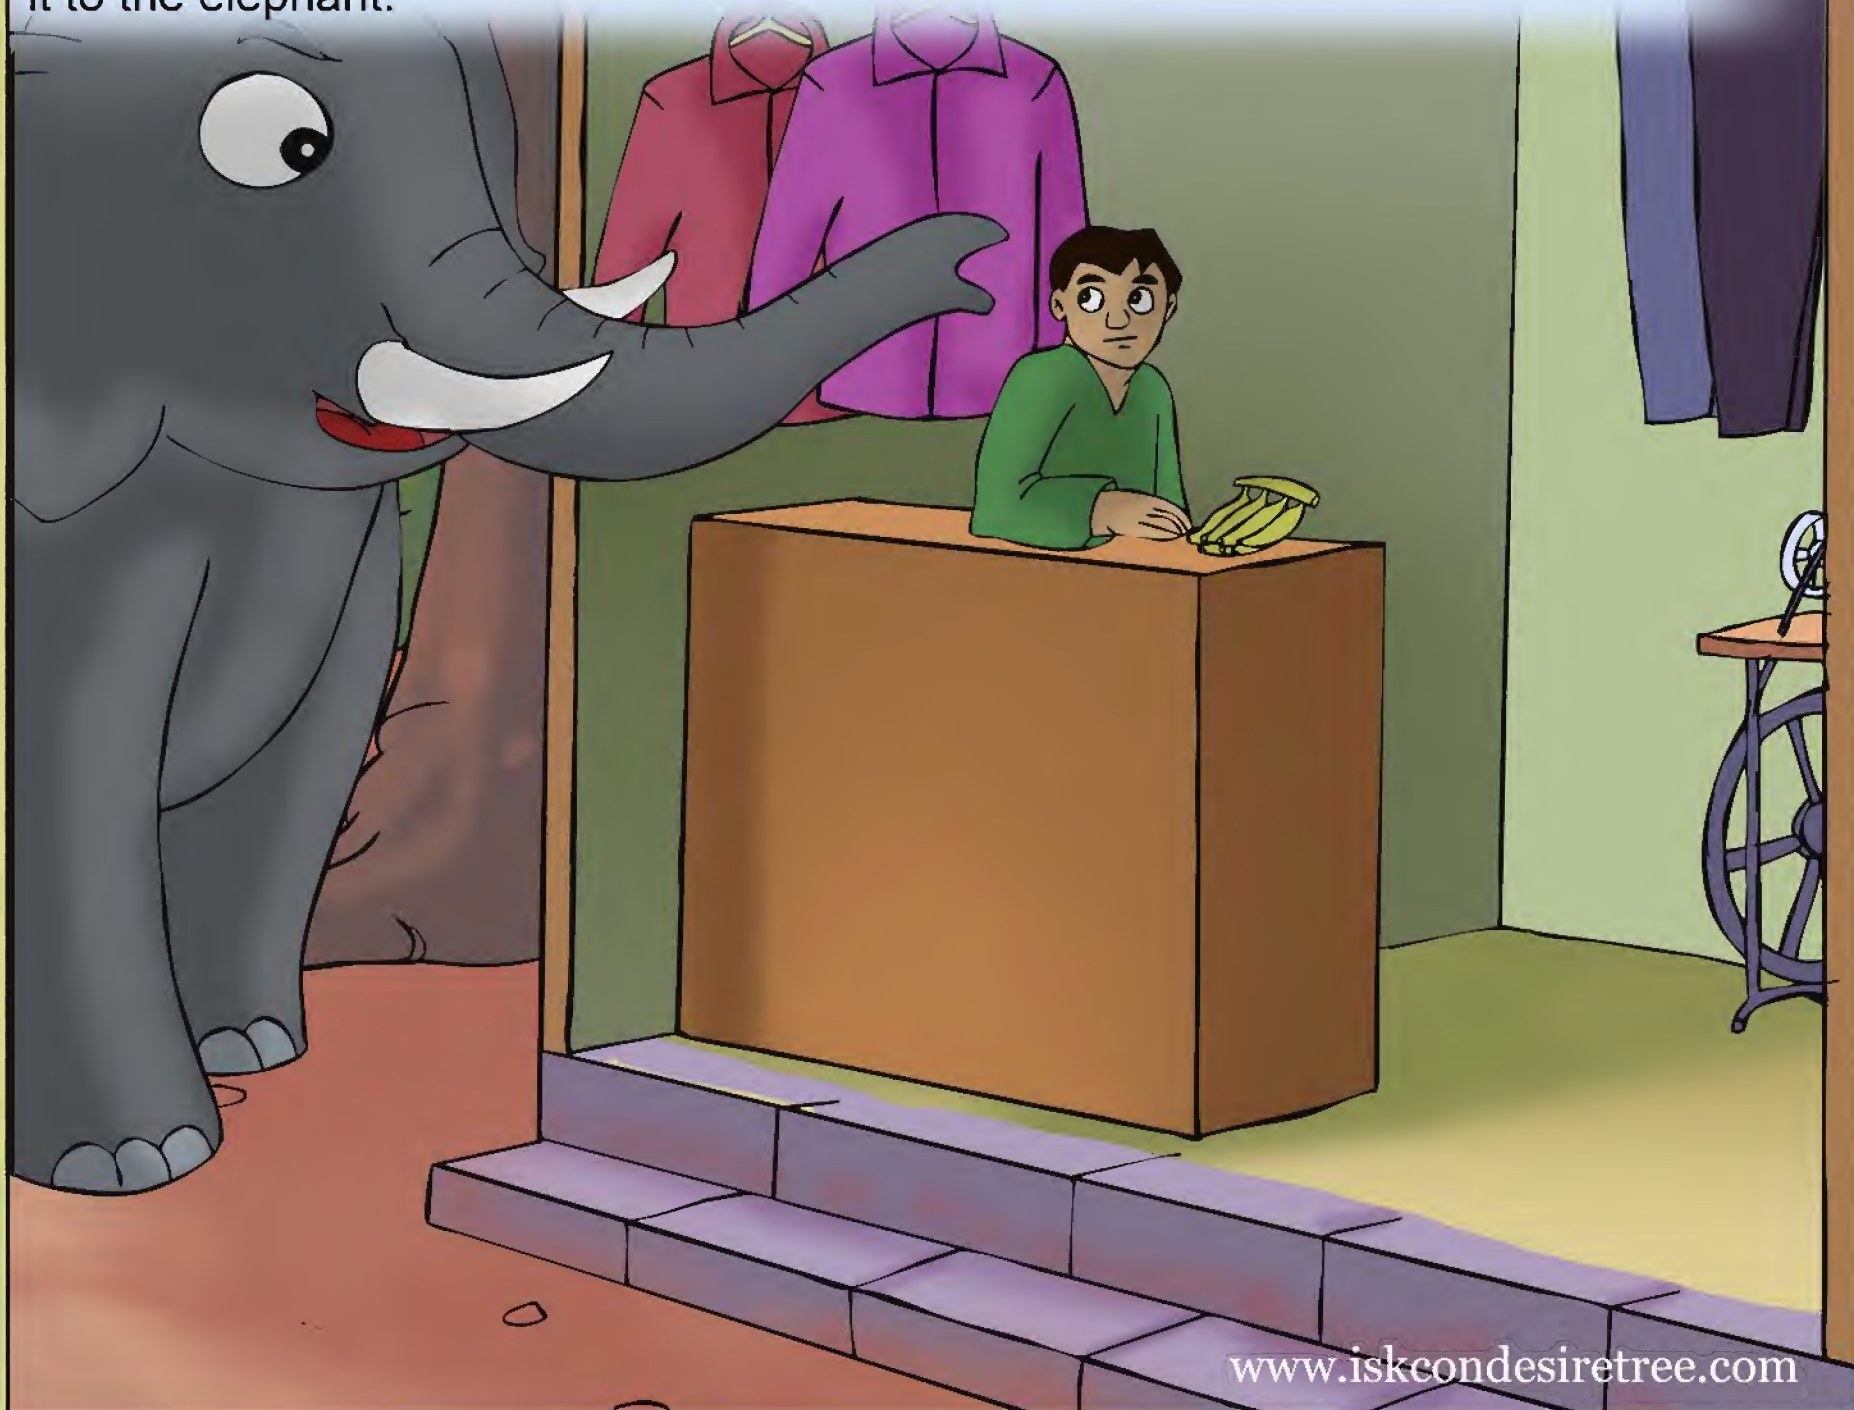

Everyday the elephant would visit the near by village. He would entertain the villagers, old and young with his very pleasing behavior.

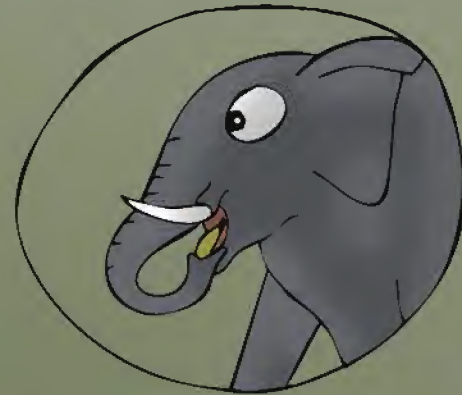

Everyday the elephant would also visit the tailor. They had become very close friends. The tailor would feed him bananas daily.

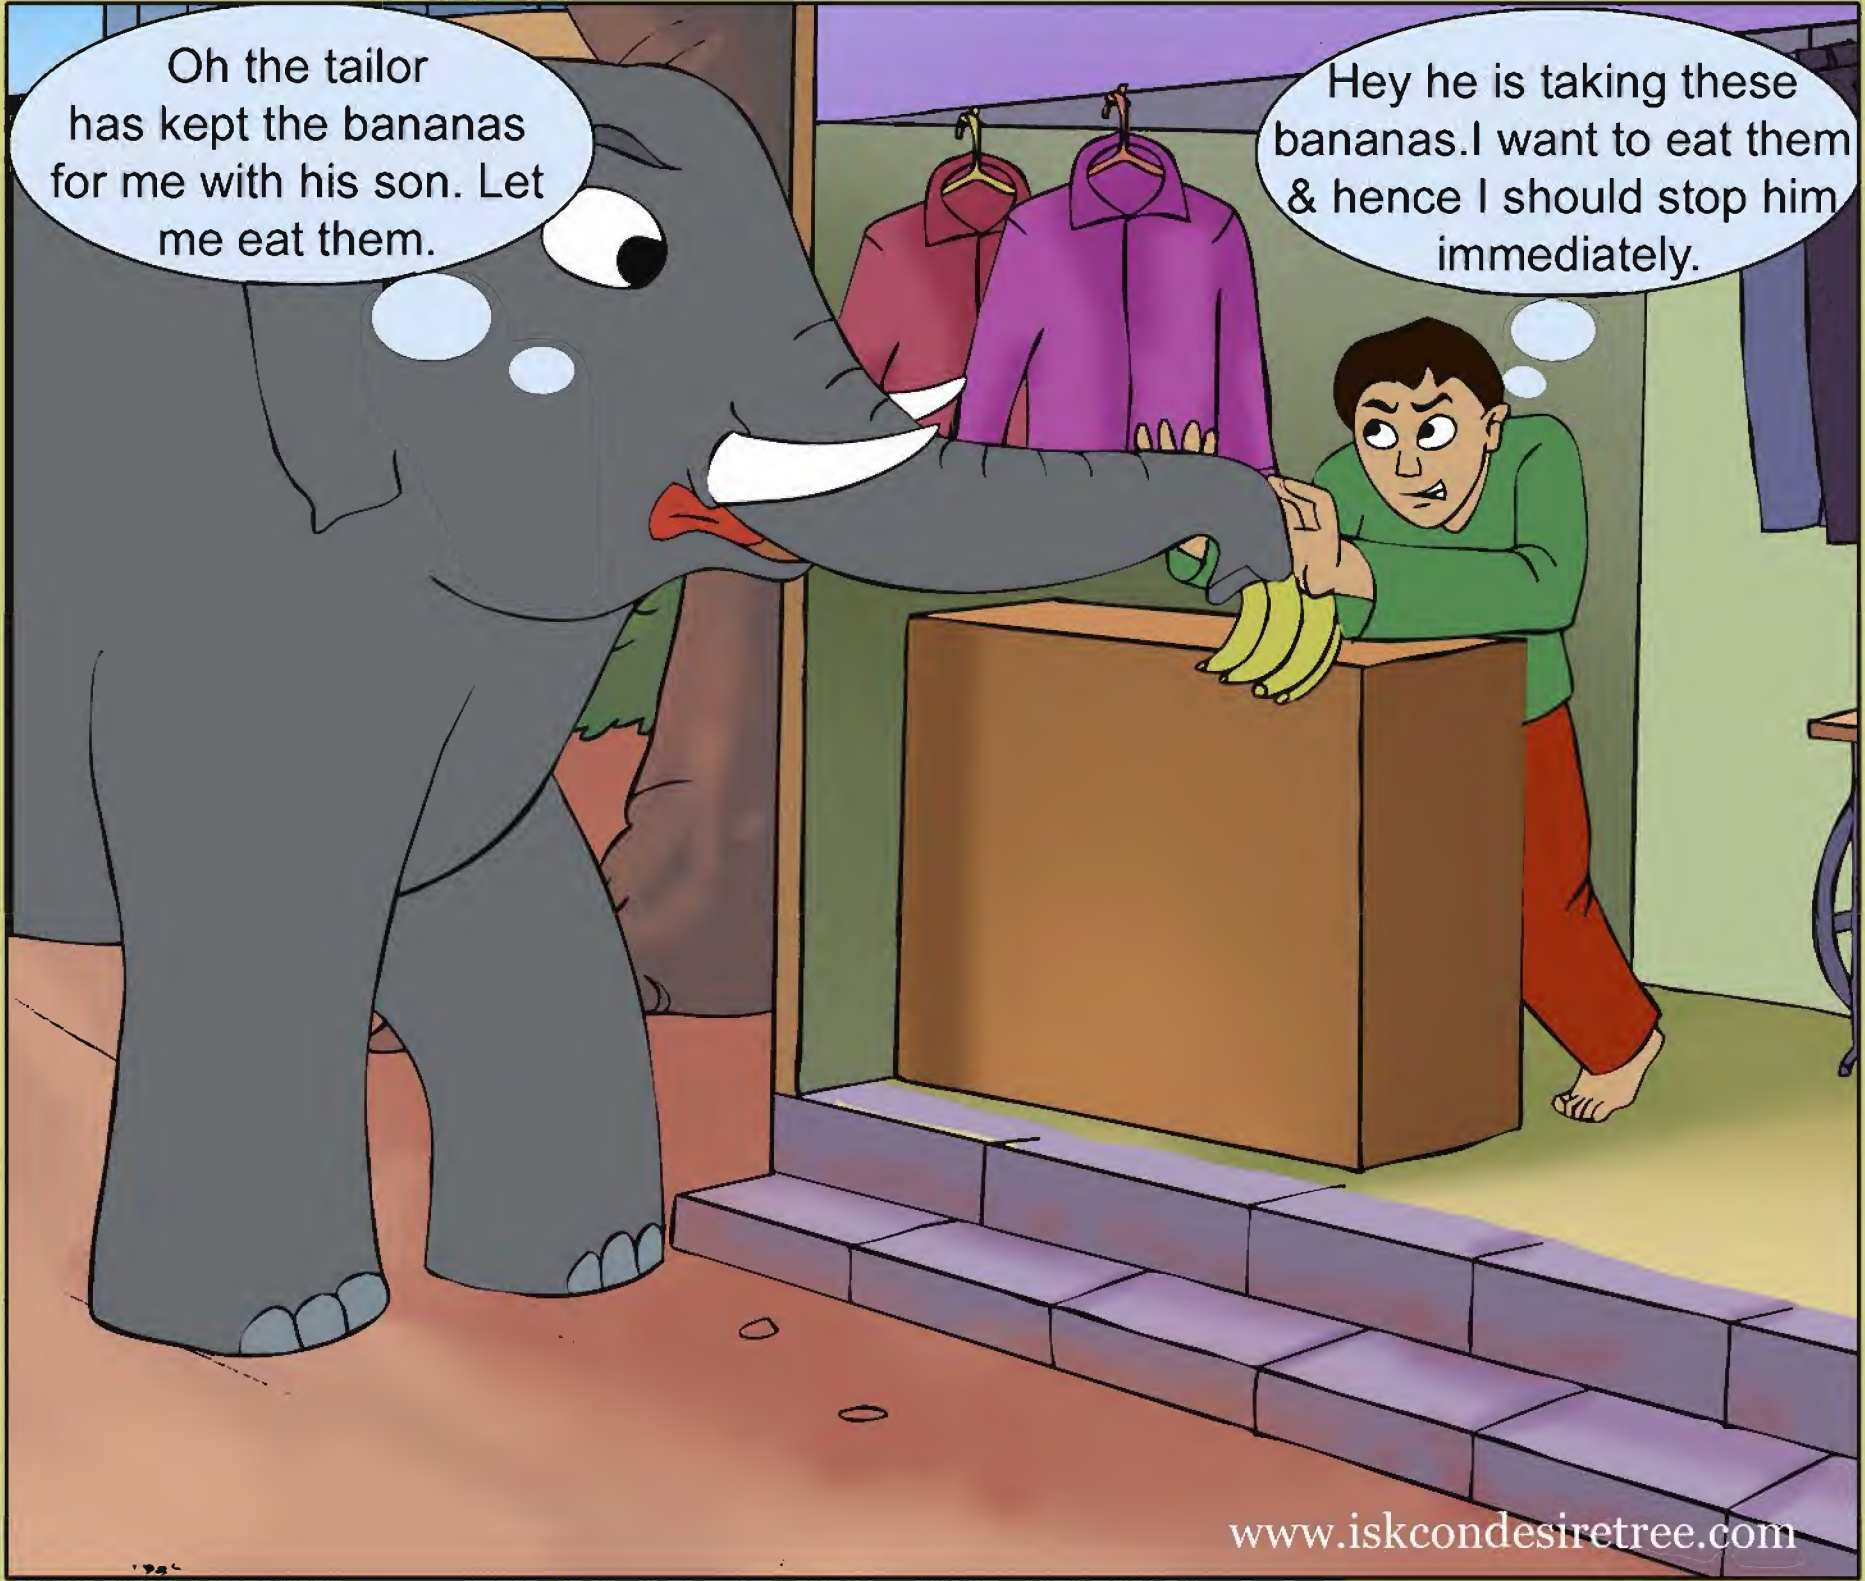

One day, the tailor was not going to be in the shop. Knowing that the elephant would visit him, he had purchased the bananas and instructed his son to offer it to the elephant.

This bananas are so delicious. Why should I give it to the elephant? Better I eat them.

Oh the tailor has kept the bananas for me with his son. Let me eat them.

Hey he is taking these bananas. I want to eat them & hence I should stop him immediately.

You naughty elephant.
How dare you take these bananas. Let me punish you by poking this long needle

He immediately went to the nearby village pond and filled his truck with the dirty water.

He returned to the village in a very angry mood and headed straight to the tailors' shop.

He sprayed the dirty water on the tailor's son. As a result the whole shop with the clothes became very dirty

Just at that time the tailor returned...

What happened
my son? How come you and all these clothes get so dirty ?

The son explained the whole episode to his father...

Because you did not follow my instructions and became greedy for those bananas, the elephant has taught you a lesson. Since he is my good friend, he has behaved mercifully, else he could have killed you. Never misbehave with anyone and never become greedy. My son, please follow the instructions of your well wisher.

Let us feed the elephant and thus thank him for teaching you a very important lesson.

